The New York Evening Post, (Radical,) save that it abhors the tariff system, discusses the San Domingo scheme of President Grant, and says: "The people do not want to fling away millions upon such wild projects; nor do they want to unnecessarily add semi-civilized people to our population." If not desirable to add San Domingans to the voting population of the United Statet, why more Governor Holden Following in the Tracks so to make Southern blacks voters? Was the investure of negroes with all rights of citizenship a measure indicative of patriotism and devotion to sambo's well-being or was it not a simple mode of filustrating Northern detestation of Southern whites and vindictiveness toward the Southern States? Sen Dominguns are surely well fitted for tasks of citizenship as Southern negroes, and it is difficult for Southern people to understand why objections are sugued on the other by Colonel Clarke, who served with distinction on the Confederate side.
